Mr. Allison has shown his hand to his rival before the bidding has closed. A question of great importance which is serving to bring about united Republican councils has to how the Tariff bill, once licked into acceptable shape, shall be played to the party's advantage in next Fall's Congressional campaign. The Republicans themselves realize that their chances to carry the next House are almost hopeless. Discontent with the Administration and distrust of Republican leader-ship in general will count for so much that it will take something resembling a miracle to turn the tide. A Republican leader says: "If we get through too early here we'll put too long a period between our record and the appeal to the country on it. That would be a mistake. The appeal, to be effective, should be made while the record is new and well known. So, by resting only during the hot month of August, and then taking the stump and explaining our tariff and pension legislation, we could hope for the best return possible from our labors."

But this suggestion does not take into account the fact that there are numberless schemes here for looting the Treasury, which if only realized in part would bank-rupt the Government and which will be pushed with vigor as long as the session lasts.

"The Commissioner did not eay anything about the part the rain took in bringing about this happy condition of affairs, and seemed to desire that the Department should have the entire credit.

His favorite idea of letting the cleaning out at contract was pointed to, and he asserted that his opinion in that regard had not charged a particle.

The Committee has been obliged to move from the large room in the Superior Court to one of much smaller dimensions in the Comfinor Pleas.

Then Turnbull made an acceptable pronosition, which was that he would insure his life for $5,000 in favor of Deutsch, and yies versa, and so it was done.

The trouble between Turnbull and Hyde was of eight years' standing. It originated at the Grand Opera-Hone, when Turnbull chased Hyde out of the lobby with a keife.

Thereafter the men seldom met, and never in a business way until Saturday night, when they were both peddling tickets at the Fourteenth Street Theatre.

Turnbull renewed the old quarrel and punched Hyde with his fists and an umbrella, nutil the latter pulled his pistol and chaved Mr. Turnbull away for ever with a frtal shot. "You were the attorney for Mr. Ives?".

LONDON, March 24.—The interest in the Oxford-Cambridge boat race, to be rowed for Wednesday next, exceeds that of recent vers, and increases as the day approaches, owing to the fine work done by both crews and the remarkably fast time made in their distip practice.

The latest betting is more nearly even than it has been since regular guotations have been published.

The figures announced this morning are it to 10 on Oxford.

The lads took to their heels and told the first man they met of their ghastly flad. This happened to be Morgue Recere Durning, who in turn notified the police.

The body was removed to the Morgue and examined for evidence of foul play, but none could be found. Neither were there any indications that the man had committed suicide. A bank book in his pocket showed that he had $130 on deposit, and identified him as Gottfried Muller, a car inspector for the Jersey Central road. He was a preminent member of the Germania Schuelzen Bund.
